Good News for KC Moms

Candy Tai wanted to connect with other Kansas City area mothers after the birth of her son. Utilizing ingenuity and her web skills, she designed kcmetromoms.com, an online website for connecting KC metro moms. Tai envisions the website becoming the primary online resource for mothers in the metro area, and the place where moms go for information, resources and to connect with each other.

Participating on the website is free, and once moms become members, they are eligible to enter monthly drawings for free prizes and gifts that have been donated by local businesses. Tai has been garnering support for the site by acquiring local sponsors such as Star 102.1 Radio and Babies R Us. She hopes to attract more interested merchants who can provide special offers to moms and playgroups.

"It's often hard to connect with other moms and kids in the metro area and the site makes it so much easier to meet," Tai says explaining that moms can arrange playgroups, dinners out, and experience the satisfaction of sharing with other moms in online discussion forums.
